Abstract

The language policies of EU institutions in the context of migration

This paper analyses language policies adopted by EU institutions in the context of migration dynamics. It aims to study how over the years European institutions have managed issues of mobility, linguistic-cultural diversity, and linguistic integration of migrants and their children.

The first part of the essay focuses on the language policy interventions promoted by the Council of Europe from the late 1960s until today. The second part focuses on the actions launched by the European Union, especially in recent years.

Keywords: multilingualism; migrant languages; language policies; EU Institutions; linguistic integration.
