Abstract

The Street Names of Rome Within the Aurelian Walls Between the 18th and the 20th Centuries

The article analyses the variations of toponyms in the historic center of Rome and is divided into two parts. The first part considers the preunitary toponyms, the second the toponyms of the city as the capital of the new Kingdom. To assess any changes in the nature and function of toponyms, the semantic groups to which they belonged were identified. For instance, some toponyms are related to architectural details or to the shape of the circulation area, others refer to names of plants or names of occupations. The semantic fields of the "rioni" into which the city was divided have been identified, too. Finally, we took into account the toponyms present in the Nolli map that survived the topographic rearrangement affecting the city during the period considered.
